Lake Tahoe Virtual Assistant Earns Real Estate Professional Assistant (REPA) Certificate

Raquel A. Nilson of Executive Assistance International has recently earned the Real Estate Professional Assistant Certificate awarded by the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS.

Lake Tahoe, NV (PRWEB) January 11, 2006 -- Raquel A. Nilson of Executive Assistance International has recently earned the Real Estate Professional Assistant Certificate awarded by the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS.

All successful real estate brokers and agents know how important a good assistant is to their success. "The best investment of time and money", says Martin Edwards, Jr., president of the National Association of Realtors, "just might be in a well-trained professional assistant. The REPA course can turn the right candidate for assistant - or any support position for that matter - into an agent's 'right hand'."

Understanding this, Nilson took the REPA certificate course to become familiar with the inner workings of the real estate industry, studying such topics as professional and ethical standards, local listing and sales procedures and how to manage a real estate transaction.

Nilson is already providing multimedia services to the real estate industry by creating and maintaining websites for real estate professionals, assisting in their marketing programs and performing virtual business support services.

To further her professional education, Nilson is currently finishing her Specialized Certificate in Online Teaching from the University of California San Diego and working towards a Masters in Educational Technology from the San Diego State University.
